It's the entrance ceremony of Yamagata College of Industry and Technology. Tomoki and Yuka happen to meet on campus.

Yuka: Wait... Tomoki? Is that you?

Tomoki: Yeah! Yuka, right? Wow! I can't believe it! What a surprise to see you here! Looks like we'll be studying together again for the next two years.

Yuka: Crazy, right? I am in the digital engineering course. What about you?

Tomoki: I am studying in the intelligent electronic system course.

Yuka: Nice. Where are you living?

Tomoki: I got an apartment in Yamagata City. For the first time living on my own.

Yuka: Lucky you. I'm still *commuting from my hometown, Yonezawa. Where in Yamagata City is your place?

Tomoki: It's near South Aeon Shopping Mall. It's a bit small though---just a six-mat room.

Yuka: Oh, cool! My grandparents are getting me a used car soon, so I'll be driving to school starting next month.

Tomoki: I'll be biking it. Hey, we should talk more after the ceremony. Let's have lunch together in the cafeteria. It's on the first floor of the *student union building. I heard the food is super cheap and delicious.

Yuka: Sounds good. Let's meet at the entrance at 12:30 pm.

Tomoki: Perfect. See you then.

Yuka: See ya.

Ⅷ 次の英文の概要を130字程度の日本語にまとめなさい。*の語については、〔注〕を参照しなさい。句読点は字数に含みません。

After retiring from his full-time job a few years ago, Toru Takahashi started working part-time at a small hotel. His tasks include helping guests at the front desk, answering phone calls, serving food and drinks in the restaurant, making beds, and more.

One day, while cleaning a room, he noticed a pair of slippers *neatly placed by the door. Making the bed, he saw that the nightwear had been folded carefully on top. And then he found a handwritten note, saying “Thank you”, *wiping the desk. These small gestures from the guests made him feel warmhearted and brought him joy.

Thanks to these kind acts, Toru realized that work isn’t just about earning money—it can also bring emotional happiness. He now hopes to work as long as he can.

〔注〕 neatly: きちんと wipe: 拭く
